Â AÂ CORRESPONDENCEÂ COURSEÂ IN ANCIENTÂ MESOPOTAMIANÂ ASTROLOGY

as practiced from 5 500 BC to AD 75.

Ancient Mesopotamian Astrology, Â according to the tradition, is coming directly from the illumination of the first Hermes, the prophet Enoh, Lord Enmeduranki from pre-diluvial Sippar in 5 500 BC.

Â This course strives to be a complete reconstruction of the MesopotamianAstrology as it was practiced from 5 500 BC to 75 AD.The main points of its blue-print are found in texts with information directlycoming from 5 500 BC (Astrolabe i.e. 3-stars-each) or 1 300 BC (MUL.APIN) ortexts as old as the Gilgamesh and the Creation epos (Enuma elish) and, of course,Enuma Anu Enlil with earliest sources from 2 300 BC (Sargon the Great omina).The details of the attempted reconstruction are coming from the last restorationof the Astral Revelation made by the third Hermes in around 770 BC. This system isevident from the LBAT 1499 series of tablets and will be explained in the course.The reconstruction is achieved by examination of original texts in Akkadian.

Â

The cycle starts with an exercise in three-parts.

The first part presents two charts, very similar, of two women - one happily married with a child and the other problematically divorced and lonely and without any children.

The question is which chart belongs to which woman!

The correct answer is easily deduced only if we knew one simple doctrine of Hermes.

The second part of the exercise shows four horoscopes of four women.Â Two of them are happy mothers (and grandmothers) and two either have never had a child or have lost it tragically in very young age!

Â Again it is asked which is which!

And again, knowing another quite simple doctrine of Ancient Astrology will allow us easily to tell the charts apart!

The third part presents four charts of men.Â Two of them have been or still are in prison.Â The other two are successful businesmenn who never had any problems with police or jail.

Which is which?

Again, kjnowledge of one of the main teachings of Hermes can easily reveal us the truth!

The answers to the exercises with discussion are given in the last video hour.
